

THE WORLD INSIDE OUT:

Your deepest nature, your skills, your truth, your dedication to making a difference – all are sorely needed from each of us in our world.

9 day Processwork and Worldwork Intensive

Facilitation Training with Arlene and Jean-Claude Audergon

January 30 – February 7 2020

We can think of nothing more important, and ultimately nothing more fun than the practice of staying close and alongside your own awareness, whether you are alone in meditation or among people.

One of the most important things about Processwork and Worldwork is that its methods support people to grapple with the most difficult themes in their lives as individuals, in relationship, in organisations and community – and in working with the divisiveness and conflict within our wider society and world.

It may be a kind of truism, yet seems important to say. Your key to facilitating others is your own practice of awareness. You are your only chance! When in close contact with yourself, you have a chance to relate to and facilitate others. Without this awareness, it is easy to feel sunk, caught in polarisations, swimming or drowning in the troubles you had hoped to solve.

Awareness practice can mean discovering how you are linked to the wider field that is moving you - your personal and family history, our collective history, and an underlying 'field' that links us all, and is moving you and all of us in surprising ways.

9 Days

We will be 9 days together! Oh My! A chance for all of us to both 'retreat' from everyday life, to be able to focus on our inner awareness practice, and a chance to practice and study 'worldwork' facilitation in a large group setting, and to process the collective issues of our times.

Learning methods

We want to explore new ways of learning about this essential interplay of inner work and worldwork. Each of us is always at a growing edge. And collectively, as a society, we are at a growing edge to learn to facilitate rather than just be taken into the river of difficulties that we are in together.

We all learn in different ways and by way of different combinations of methods - reflecting on new ideas and skills, modeling, making contact with an inner teacher, visual imagery, movement, dance and song, sensing and feeling, discussion and debate, jumping in, giving it a whirl, making errors, having a beginner's mind and a curious and playful attitude, going slow, feeling nervous and observing. A difficult, but important part of learning about facilitation is to be able to engage in a conflict and at the same time learn to facilitate it.

Some of the world's greatest leaders have been people who were deeply committed to their own practice of awareness, and at the same time devoted to social and collective change.

Yet, the notion that we might become conscious as individuals and as societies in our interactions together is still often considered to be a bit 'new agey', rather than an imperative. Whether our focus is more inner or outer, it's awareness that we need – especially in these difficult and divisive times.

Mornings: We will focus on Processwork and Worldwork concepts and skills including what the Mindells have been referring to as the 'second training' – your contact to your deepest nature and the underlying 'processmind' that moves you and brings you in touch with the attitudes that help you to facilitate, and bring a sense of life purpose and meaning. These patterns can be found through working with the early childhood dream and our most subtle body experiences.

Afternoons: We will focus on facilitating group process – and studying group process. This will include large and small group facilitation practice, and study of process structure with a range of learning methods.

Day by day, in morning and afternoon sessions, we'll build upon skills and facilitation practice.

Themes will include:

- The facilitator's inner life and body awareness
- Field:
 - Perceiving in 3 dimensions (consensus reality, dreamland and essence); channels of perception (visual, auditory, proprioception and kinaesthetic)
 - Staying in contact with sentient awareness while working with outer tensions and role polarisations
- Personal and collective trauma:
 - Personal and collective healing
 - Working with personal and collective shock
 - Dynamics of trauma and privilege
 - Healing the split of our traumatic world story

- Body awareness and healing trauma, with focus on sentience, proprioception and movement
- Transforming history, collective witnessing and accountability
- Working with system dynamics of privilege, power and structural discrimination:
 - Complex rank dynamics: including social rank (gender, race, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, class, education, age, disability and more); psychological rank; and spiritual rank
 - Asymmetrical polarisations – when the polarisation is not a 2-sided conflict (e.g. Genocide is not a conflict between two ‘sides’, nor is discrimination or abuse.)
 - Working with gate-keepers, backlash and zigs and zags
- Systems with Awareness:
 - Paradigm and methodology of Deep Democracy
 - Systems and process dynamics (roles and identity)
 - Limits and possibilities to systemic change
 - Hot spots, cool spots, polarisation and transformation
 - The ‘edge’ of the facilitator / the ‘edge’ of the culture and the ‘edge’ of the world or worldview
- The Facilitator’s Path / You Matter
 - Process Mind and your ‘second training’
 - Awareness of ‘Phases’ of conflict
 - Case studies in transformation

Filming:

To support study and documentation, we film our interactions. There will be a release form to sign.

Who attends:

In past courses there have been a diversity of participants interested in developing the link between one’s personal awareness and one’s contribution – for personal development and for professional and creative development in a range of different fields, including mediation, conflict resolution and peace-building, social action, business and organisational development, religious and spiritual organisations, government, counseling and therapy, movement, performance and the arts and education.

CPD

Certificate of Attendance and Continuing Professional Development credits available

- The Intensive stands alone as a 9-day course for personal and professional development.
- The Intensive can also be taken as part of CFOR’s modular training program. For more information, contact admin@cfor.info.
- The modular course stands alone or can serve as a pathway to the Processwork UK International Diploma Program (UKCP or Worldwork track)

Registration:

Fee for the 9 day Intensive: £870 with £200 deposit

Fee Early / Early-bird: £720 with £200 deposit before July 1 2019

Fee Early-bird: £770 with £200 deposit before Sept. 15 2019

A limited number of partial work-study bursaries will be available.

To register: Email seminars@processworkuk.org your wish to attend.

We'll ask you for contact details and let you know how to pay the deposit. Registration is upon receipt of your deposit. In recent years, the Intensive has filled to capacity; please register early to reserve your place and to support ease of administration.

Venue:

Pax Lodge is situated about five minutes from our offices in Belsize Park. We've been enjoying doing our Intensives at this lovely, secluded location among Northwest London bustle.

Accommodation:

Participants come from different parts of the UK and many countries. We would be happy to send you a list of local accommodation, and are glad when you share your ideas. Air BnB has been useful and you may also be able to stay at Pax Lodge with early booking directly with the venue. Let them know you are with our group, and if you would like a single room or to share with others.

Timing:

The first day begins with coffee, tea and registration. Please arrive between 9.30 and 9.40 for a 10 am start. The Intensive runs daily from 10 am to 6.30 pm with lunch and tea breaks. On the evening before our last day, we'll have an evening 'get-together' with light dinner, hanging out and dancing. The last day ends at 4 pm.

Processwork UK www.processworkuk.org or the Research Society for Process-oriented Psychology UK (RSPOPUK) was established in 1988 to support research and training in Processwork, developed by Dr. Arnold Mindell. Processwork UK sponsors events, seminars and Intensive courses, 1-year training programmes and a 5-year International Diploma programme. There are two Processwork Diploma pathways: the Processwork Diploma in Worldwork and the UKCP accredited Diploma in Process Oriented Psychotherapy. Processwork UK is a lively and thriving learning community of formal and informal students and practitioners.

CFOR www.cfor.info, is a NGO and registered Charity devoted to the role of personal and collective awareness and facilitated dialogue for processing history, conflict resolution, community recovery, transitional justice and violence prevention. It supports individuals, teams, communities and organisations to engage with the complex problems we face together and to find pathways forward. CFOR's work is in the UK and Continental Europe, Rwanda, the Balkans and South Africa.

Arlene Audergon, PhD UKCP and Jean-Claude Audergon, MSc UKCP are co-founders of Processwork UK and CFOR, and teach Processwork internationally. Arlene is author of the book 'The War Hotel: Psychological Dynamics in Violent Conflict'.
